Dog rescue 'flat-out lied'

PETS

Gentle animals fell victim to summary euthanasia: Critics

Lucie Edwardson
Metro | Calgary

Local dog rescue Pawsitive Match Rescue Foundation (PMRF) is under fire after two separate complaints have called their practices into question.

Jess Reimond said she made the heart-wrenching decision May 25 to return her pup Chester, whom she adopted in April 2013 from PMRF. She cited the dog's "behavioural issues" toward her daughter.

"He's a great dog and we loved him deeply," she said.

Reimond said she was informed verbally, and again over email, that Chester would undergo behavioural assessments in the hope of having him re-adopted.

She said she was told that in the worst-case scenario, Chester would be euthanized. Reimond said she asked if she could be present in that circumstance.

On June 15, Reimond received an email from the PMRF employee she'd been in contact with, stating that after "numerous assessments and vet checkups" they had to "let him go" that weekend.

Reimond said she was shocked to learn through the cremation certificate that Chester had been put down May 26, while the employee continued to email her as though he was alive for weeks.

"She flat-out lied to me," she said. "What rescue lies like that and doesn't even give a dog a chance?"

James Buchanan also posted to the PMRF Facebook page, upset about his foster dog Mona, who was also euthanized.

"Mona was a loving and gentle pup," he wrote. "Rather than let her be adopted by a wonderful home, the organization decided to euthanize her."

In an email, the PMRF board of directors said while they believe in second chances for dogs, "we sometimes make the difficult decision to put public safety first."

PMRF said they didn't, however, condone the false communications.

"The misleading information is not something the organization supports, and that particular member of our group has stepped down," they said.

Sisters ordered to take down community swing

LIABILITY

Bylaw to be enforced after anonymous complaint

Brodie Thomas
Metro | Calgary

An anonymous complaint has put an end to front-yard summer fun for one family in Bridgeland.

This spring, Reilly McMillan, 11, and her sister Gracie, 8, convinced their parents to help them hang a swing from the mature tree in front of their home.

"Trees are supposed to be for swinging and climbing, and we couldn't climb this tree because it was too tall — so we put a swing on just to have fun," said Gracie.

Reilly said their nearest playground doesn't have a swing set, and the next-nearest one only has a saucer swing.

And everyone knows saucer-swings just aren't the same as a good old-fashioned wood-and-rope swings.

"We made it from scratch," said Reilly. "We bought the wood and rope and stuff and Dad made it in the garage."

Gracie helped by decorating the swing — adding blue and white ribbons and a painted heart that says "Swing to the sky."

"They looked up how to do the knots and how to hang the swing so it wouldn't tear the tree," said Gracie.

The swing was getting lots of use by the two sisters, their friends, and even random passers-by.

The girls dubbed it a "little free swing," in the spirit of the front-yard libraries that have become common around Calgary.

However, the fun will come to an end this weekend when the McMillan family takes the swing down for good.

The girls' mom, Ali, said she got a knock on the door early this week and a City of Calgary

"Trees are supposed to be for swinging and climbing ... so we put a swing on just to have fun."

Gracie McMillan

employee politely explained they would have to take the swing down for "liability reasons."

The tree is on the other side of the sidewalk, and is therefore the property of the City of Calgary.

However, Jeannette Wheeler, urban forestry lead with the City of Calgary, confirmed to Metro the city dealt with the matter as a result of an anonymous tip.

"We were forced to investigate the tip because we do this on a case-by-case basis," said Wheeler.

She explained there is a bylaw that prevents people from attaching things to public trees. A swing could chafe the bark over time.

"I don't think there's fault with the family," said Wheeler. "They just wanted to have fun."

Ali is disheartened that her girls are going to lose something they put out for the betterment of the entire community.

"To me it was just a sign of the sad state of society that we can't have the swing on the tree," she said.

CONTROVERSY

Burger joint riles students

Helen Pike
Metro | Calgary

There's a sizzling debate on campus about whether a controversial burger chain should push patties at the University of Calgary's MacEwan Hall food court.

In May, the Students' Union approved vendor Carl's Jr. to take the place of Sweet & Savoury in the student-run food court with some strict restrictions on their saucy ad campaigns.

But over the weekend, controversy erupted after a student posted a petition on Facebook opposing the chain's entry into Mac Hall because of their lack of "healthy" options and history of female objectification.

"It's clear that Carl's Jr. does not consider women as part of its demographic, nor (considered) in their business model as more than sexual objects," read a letter written by Clare Hickie. "Not only is this offensive and degrading, but it is also painfully out of touch with the diverse and inclusive student community at the University of Calgary."

Not to go unopposed by those who love their beef, another petition cropped up asking students to welcome the chain.

Jeff Branton, vice-president for Carl's Jr. Canada said the branding is "not for everybody."

"We target young hungry guys, and young hungry guys like attractive young ladies," he said. "We're not ashamed that that's who we promote to, or how we promote it."

POLICE

3 suspects sought in abduction

Calgary police are hunting three men they say attempted to abduct another man in broad daylight early this month.

At 3:20 p.m. on June 8, police were called to a home on the 2800 block of 23 Avenue SW, when a older-model green SUV carrying three men pulled up behind the victim, who was in his vehicle.

Police described the three suspects as black, five feet five inches to six feet tall and aged 25 to 35. Anyone with information about the identity of the suspects or whereabouts of the green SUV are asked to call police at 403-266-1234. METRO

DRUG BUST

Fentanyl, cocaine seized

Four alleged drug traffickers are in custody after police raided two homes — one in Calgary and one in Airdrie.

In a joint operation between the Airdrie Crime Reduction Unit, Calgary RCMP, Calgary Police Service and ALERT (Alberta Law Enforcement Response Team), on June 17, two warrants were executed in the cities.

Police seized more than 200 grams of cocaine, fentanyl, MDMA, Canadian currency and trafficking paraphernalia.

In Calgary, Andrew Knapp, 31, and Honour Toth, 26, have been charged with possession of a controlled substance for the purpose of trafficking and possession of a controlled substance.

In Airdrie, Karlee Kettner, 28, and Wade Gunoff, 34, have been charged and face numerous offences in connection with the bust. METRO

City orders removal of 'graphic' signage

Crews placed sign after they say person was clipped by car

Colourful pedestrian warning signage was swiftly removed Tuesday afternoon after the city ordered crews to get rid of it, according to a construction worker at the site.

Tuesday morning, Coun. Druh Farrell tweeted a photo of a warning sign — located outside the Burns Building in Olympic Plaza — that depicted a pedestrian striking the windshield of a car. It read, "Sidewalk closed. Use other sidewalk."

Farrell said the sign and "the lack of foot access" shows disdain for pedestrians.

But Trevor Bryan, the construction manager at the site, said crews placed the sign because a pedestrian had been clipped by a car-door mirror after not obeying the original sign, which read, "Sidewalk Closed."

"We put our own signs up this morning," he said. "But the city said it was too graphic."

The city said it ordered crews to remove the sign due to its graphic content and that it didn't fall within guidelines, said roads spokeswoman Brittany Kustra.

Though striking, some Calgarians said the sign could be effective in reducing accidents.

Ryan Contenti, who works as a tailor downtown, said he thinks the sign is fine.

"There's nothing gruesome about it," Contenti said. "I feel like those sidewalk-closed signs get brushed off pretty easily, so it's not the worst sign ever."

Stephanie Ho, who also works closing off the entire sidewalk.

There is "no effort to accommodate pedestrians," she said.

Sean Somers, spokesman with the city's transportation department, said there was no other way to accommodate pedestrians in this case, as crews are working on the building's facade.

downtown, said she thinks the sign is "pretty graphic."

"But it does get the message across, don't get me wrong," Ho said. "My initial thought was, 'Oh yeah, don't cross the road.'"

But Farrell said the construction site could have better accommodated pedestrians by not

However, he said the city has accommodated more pedestrians by significantly reducing the number of pedestrian detours.

Kustra said the site's barricades were provided by the city, adding the city isn't considering to install signs with such content in the future.

HEALTH

$3.3M in flu shots unused

Alberta Health returned or destroyed about $3.3 million-worth of flu vaccines last year, as the province saw slightly fewer people get inoculated during the 2015-16 season.

On Monday, the health department released its last report of the 2015-16 flu season, finding that 27 per cent of Albertans were immunized, close to the historical immunization rates of 30 per cent.

During the 2014-15 flu season, Alberta Health said it returned or destroyed about 694,404 doses, which is equal to about $3.3 million.

This past flu season, the government said it has 521,283 doses left, but has not returned or destroyed those doses yet.

Reasons for vaccine wastage include product problems, short expiry dates and lower-than-expected vaccine rates.

The government has also reduced its flu immunization targets to 35 per cent for the 2016-17 season, as last season's target was 40 per cent.

Alberta Health has also placed a vaccine order for the 2016-17 season at a cost of $12.7 million for 1.6 million doses.

For the 2015-16 fiscal year, the government bought 1.8 million doses at the same cost.

There were also 5,000 lab-confirmed cases of Influenza A and B throughout Alberta during the 2015-16 season.

In April, Dr. Martin Lavoie with Alberta Health said the 2015-16 vaccine was more effective than the 2014-15 shot, noting the reduced number of hospitalizations.

NDP defends $4.4M ads

ENVIRONMENT

Province has spent $52.1M on ads in past 7 fiscal years

Jeremy Simes
For Metro | Calgary

Alberta Environment Minister Shannon Phillips has defended using all modes of media to promote the government's climate change plan at a cost of $4.4 million to taxpayers.

On Wednesday, Phillips said the multi-million dollar summer ad campaign is necessary due to its sweeping impact after the Wildrose said the money could've been better spent.

In fact, the government spent about $5.4 million on advertising during the 2015-16 fiscal year, a 12.9 per cent decrease from $6.2 million in 2014-15.

Phillips couldn't say if the government will decrease ad spending in the future, but emphasized that the carbon-plan

Alberta Environment Minister Shannon Phillips defended the government's ad-campaign spending on its climate plan. COURTESY GOVERNMENT OF ALBERTA

“This is a diverse province — not everyone has access to information in the same way. Shannon Phillips advertisements reach 97 per cent of Albertans online, and through print, radio, television and cinema.

“This is a diverse province — not everyone has access to information in the same way,” Phillips said. “So that will make sure the vast majority of people can receive information. It's important to get accurate details and consider the plan as a whole.”

In total, the Government of Alberta has spent about $52.1 million to advertise programs and budgets since the 2009-10 fiscal year. That includes about $46.7 million and $5.4 million from the Progressive Conservatives and NDP, respectively, based on fiscal years in office.

On average, governments spend about $8.5 million per year to advertise plans and budgets.

On Tuesday, Wildrose environment critic Todd Loewen said the NDP could've made better use of the $4.4 million by possibly spending it on roads, health care or education.

“If they have to spend that much money to sell it, obviously Albertans aren't buying it,” he said on Tuesday.

In reply to Loewen's comment, Phillips said, “The Wildrose Opposition doesn't believe climate change is real, so of course they're not going to want to communicate to Albertans about climate change.”

“That's fairly rich coming from a party that would cut billions of dollars from education and health care based on their election platform.”

PEDESTRIAN COLLISION

Woman struck by vehicle

A woman in her early 20s was taken to hospital with life-threatening injuries after being struck by a vehicle in the city's northwest.

EMS was called to the scene on Sherwood Boulevard at Sherwood Place NW at 6:23 a.m. Tuesday.

They found a female who had been struck by a grey Honda CRV suffering from life-threatening internal injuries. She was transported to the Foothills Medical Centre by paramedics.

EMS is unaware of the factors which led to the incident.

According to police, the 37-year-old female driver of the vehicle remained at the scene.

There were no other injured individuals reported at the scene. Calgary police are investigating.

Anyone with information on the events leading up to the crash is asked to call the Calgary Police Traffic Section at 403-567-4000.

So you're thinking about bidding on the Olympics...

Alright, so the IOC doesn't have pamphlets with that title. But with a 12-2 vote Calgary City Council resoundingly gave the approval to start exploring the possibility.

They've granted the Calgary Sport Tourism Committee (CSTA) a credit limit of up to $5 million dollars to do the exploration work.

The next step is to create a bid exploration committee by August, according to Marco De Iaco, executive director of Calgary Sport Tourism Committee (CSTA).

He said the goal is to give all levels of government the information they need to make an informed decision as to whether or not to make a bid.

"We will be looking at all sporting venues, media facilities, accommodations and villages. We will be trying to build a plan that meets the Olympic requirements but also accelerate Calgary's needs, goals and aspirations," he said.

He said the City of Calgary will work with CSTA to form the committee and launch the bid exploration process.

The CSTA has set a deadline of Aug. 31 2017 to confirm its intent to launch a bid. If the city does go ahead, there are then various submissions due beyond that date leading up to the IOC's decision in July of 2019.

De Iaco said he believes if the city were to bid on the

What about our infrastructure?

Dale Oviatt, director of communications for Winsport, said while Calgary's legacy sport infrastructure at Canada Olympic Park is good, it's also aging. "It's no secret the facilities were built in 1986 — 10 years from now they're going to be that much older," he said.

Olympic Oval

This infrastructure is owned and managed by the University of Calgary, not Winsport. It is still widely used for training and major events. Although it doesn't have the 10,000 seats the IOC has demanded of recent host cities, CSTA chair Doug Mitchell told reporters on Monday night that most seats were empty in Sochi, and he believes seating capacity could be negotiated.

Sliding Track

In 1988, skeleton wasn't an Olympic sport, so the track was used only for bobsled and luge. The track can be used for skeleton. In its recent budget, the provincial government promised $10 million over two years to refurbish the entire track. Oviatt said they'll still need about $10 million more to complete that job.

Ski Jump

The 90-metre ski jump at Canada Olympic Park is no longer used. Oviatt explained that after the 1988 Olympics, the technique and equipment used in ski jumping changed. Jumpers today fly much further and would overshoot the landing area.

HOW TO STOP SNORING!

ROBERTA SEGAR

Certified Laser Specialist

Your partner is sleeping but you are not. His or her snoring keeps you awake, night after night. So what do you do? Wear earplugs? Put a pillow over your head? Move to the spare room? There may be nights when you feel like shoving a sock in their mouth. Lack of sleep can effect your mood, your health, your quality of life, even your weight. If your partner snores there is a good chance you are not the only one not getting enough sleep. Frequent loud snoring is a symptom of a greater issue - sleep apnea, a potentially serious health problem.

Sleep Apnea has many health consequences!

Sleep apnea is a common problem that affects the way you breathe while we sleep. The most common form, known as Obstructive Sleep Apnea (OSA), occurs when the soft tissue in the back of your throat relaxes during sleep and blocks the airway. This interrupts breathing, and although the interruptions are usually brief, it can happen hundreds of times a night. It can jolt the sleeper out of natural sleep rhythms or wake them up multiple times. A person who suffers from sleep apnea will spend more time in light sleep and less time in the deep restorative sleep they need to be energetic, mentally sharp and productive the next day. Chronic sleep deprivation results in slow reflexes, poor concentration and an increased risk of accidents. It can also lead to serious health problems over time, including diabetes, high blood pressure, heart disease, stroke, and weight gain.

If you have OSA you may be completely unaware of it because you probably won't remember these awakenings. If you snore ask your bed partner to give you feedback on the sound of your breathing. Occasional light snoring does not necessarily mean you have sleep apnea, but if pauses occur while you snore, and if choking or gasping follow the pauses, these are major signs that you have OSA. If you sleep alone try recording yourself while you sleep.

The health consequences of sleep apnea are reason enough to seek treatment. Relationship problems that can also arise from lost sleep when you are a snorer or sleep with someone who is. Whether you have sleep apnea or attempt to sleep with someone who does, I have good news. Now there is a laser treatment that can tighten the tissue inside the mouth to open the airways.

Nightlase® therapy is a non-invasive patient-friendly laser treatment that reduces the effects of sleep apnea and decreases the amplitude of snoring by means of a gentle, safe, laser-induced penetration of heat to the oral mucosa tissue. To understand how it works visualize what happens to hamburger when you put it on the barbecue. It shrinks. In the case of Nightlase, the heat is gentle enough to be used on the sensitive tissue inside the mouth, but strong enough to provide efficacious heating. It does not hurt!

A full course of NightLase consists of three separate treatment sessions over a six week period. The final results of the treatment have been shown to last up to a year, and the therapy can be repeated. NightLase takes only 15 minutes to deliver and it is a highly comfortable and satisfying solution that has been clinically proven to eliminate or reduce snoring. If you currently need to wear a breathing device during sleep, this treatment may offer significant enough improvement to quit wearing it.

They say that people who snore always fall asleep first. If you suffer from obstructive sleep apnea NightLase will help you stay asleep and wake energized in the morning. If you sleep with a snorer you can finally enjoy a peaceful night's sleep, without the pillow and without the sock.

There are other laser clinics so why choose Skinpossible?

Because not all treatments work equally well. At Skinpossible we pride ourselves in offering only the very latest in breakthrough technologies. We have more technology than any other clinic in Calgary and all of our technology is tier-one within its class.

Every month we put several of our treatments or products on sale. Sign up for our monthly emails and you will never miss a special. We also use this email to announce new treatments and practice patient opportunities. We won't spam you. If you do not wish to receive this email, simply unsubscribe.

Our style of consultation is educational. During a consultation we take the time to thoroughly explain your options and make sure you have all of the information you need to make an informed decision. No pressure. No obligation. Consultations are free and so is parking.

“Thanks to the Skinpossible team for my great improvement in night time snoring! There has been a dramatic reduction with the laser treatment! No more being hit by a pillow in the middle of the night.”

Goats take bite out of invasive thistle

ECOLOGY

Shepherd says job a little like wrangling herd of 100 toddlers

Helen Pike
Metro | Calgary

These aren't country goats, they're city goats — City of Calgary employees, in fact.

On Monday, the herd moved into its new urban digs and got straight to work munching locally grown, possibly organic Canadian thistle as part of a three-week pilot project. The city will see how the cool kids work managing invasive plant species the natural way.

"We're interested in exploring alternatives to using herbicides, for example," said Chris Manderson, urban conservation lead for Calgary Parks.

The goats are also handy in areas difficult for personnel and equipment to access safely. Grazing animals are generally restricted in the city, with the exception of Confluence Park, where the pilot is taking place.

"The people walking their dogs have a big smile on their faces when they see the goats," said Manderson. That said, the city hopes dog owners can keep their pets on a leash while the goats do their thing.

Jeannette Hall, the master shepherd, said working with goats is a little like dealing with mischievous toddlers — and she has about 100 on her hands.

"We have dogs and horses, which are great employees, goats and a staff of three," said Hall. She said there are also volunteers who are helping the process along — and she's thankful for that.

"Getting to know your goats — they're very intuitive, so they tune into my mood."

Jeannette Hall works with dogs such as Tuff as well as horses to keep the 100 goats on task. HELEN PIKE/METRO

HOLODOMOR

Wildrose still sorry as article resurfaces

Jeremy Simes
For Metro | Calgary

Wildrose MLA Rick Strankman is again apologizing for comparing the NDP's carbon tax to Ukrainian genocide, after a southern Alberta town re-published the politician's original blog post in what Strankman calls a "miscommunication."

On Tuesday, NDP MLA Jessica Littlewood called on Wildrose Leader Brian Jean to take action regarding Strankman's "calous" column.

"This is far more serious than a social-media mistake," Littlewood said. "It just seems they don't have good organization in their caucus. They seem to be in disarray."

On June 5, Wildrose members apologized for Strankman's original blog post, which was signed by eight other Opposition MLAs.

The column, which was published in the Oyen Echo last week, quoted American economist Thomas Sowell, who wrote that people do more for themselves than the common good.

The column then refers to the Holodomor, a famine caused by the Soviet government when it forced Ukrainians to give up their own farms and join collective farms.

On Tuesday, Strankman said the column was submitted on May 29 to a number of rural media outlets in the constituency of Drumheller-Stettler for publication.

They seem to be in disarray.

Jessica Littlewood

"It was entirely a miscommunication that originated from my desk," Strankman said in a prepared statement. "I want to again express deepest apologies to the Ukrainian community and all Albertans for its publication and for any unintended inferences."

But Littlewood said apologies just don't cut it.

"They have already apologized," she said. "The leader needs to figure out why there is such disorganization in the caucus."

Group nails it on accessible home

GOOD WORKS

Hearts and Hammers makes family's life easier

Lucie Edwardson
Metro | Calgary

In August 2015, 12-year-old Alex's Wist's life changed forever when she broke her neck while trying to do a flip on a trampoline.

Alex spent five months recovering in the Alberta Children's Hospital with her mother, Amy Wist, by her side. Since then, she continues to make progress, but is ultimately confined to a wheel chair.

The accident made it impossible for Alex to return to her former home as it was totally inaccessible for her wheelchair.

"We didn't have anywhere to live and I couldn't get into my old house," said the now 13-year-old.

Amy was able to find Alex and herself a new home, but it required several renovations and modifications to make it fully accessible.

Some of Alex's friends and her school principal nominated the pair for a Hearts and Hammers renovation — and they were selected.

"When I found out they were going to renovate this house so that I could live here it actually meant a lot that they were going to do that for us," said Alex.

"It's changed my life because now I can actually get into my new house and I can move around and I can do everything I need."

Amy, a single mother, said the renovations have made things easier for both of them.

"They've changed everything," she said. "Now Alex can do so much more on her own."

"I don't have to carry her everywhere and it's less manual stuff and more independence for her."

John Casuga, spokesman for Hearts and Hammers, said seeing Alex be able to make full use of her house is very rewarding.

"When you see somebody that is able to fully use their home and be at home, it's the reason we do what we do," he said.

Over the last number of months Hearts and Hammers installed a porch lift, replaced all the flooring and made Alex's bathroom fully accessible.

The organization is a local non-profit that provides home renovations to families in need with mobility challenges to make their lives easier.

It's changed my life because now I can actually get into my new house and I can move around.

Life is easier for Alex Wist now thanks to renovations donated by Hearts and Hammers.

SHAKESPEARE ON THE BOW

To catch your attention, especially this Hamlet

Aaron Chatha
Metro | Calgary

Calgary's thespians are taking their first bow for this year's Shakespeare on the Bow performances.

This year, the Shakespeare Company has brought one of the Bard's bloodiest plays, Hamlet, to Prince's Island Park.

"We are literally taking one of his darkest, deepest plays and putting it out in sunshine, in plus 30 weather," laughed Natasha Strickey, who plays Hamlet.

"That morose, sombre feeling stays with you, even when you're watching children run across the aisle, or people having a full-blown picnic right in front of you."

The actors said the magic of Shakespeare on the Bow is energy of the crowd — both

Natasha Strickey (Hamlet) and Brynn Linsey (Laertes) said they're bruised, but still brimming with energy after nearly a month of rehearsals. AARON CHATHA / METRO the people watching, and the bikers and couples whizzing by. It's about matching that energy and capturing their attention in a short period of time.

"We have our little castle, and we're like the fish going around it," explained Brynn Linsey, who plays Laertes. "There's always people passing, they'll stop, take in a scene and go 'Oh, I've got to come back and see this.'"

Linsey and Strickey said the themes and characters are very relatable to audiences. They have two women playing the main roles and driving the narrative, but gender bending doesn't change the core story.

"Anyone can play Hamlet. Any gender," said Strickey. "Everyone has felt betrayal, sadness, mourning, loss — happiness."

Hamlet runs till Aug. 21. For a schedule of times and dates, visit theatrecalgary.com.

School trustees OK new $1.3B budget

The Calgary Board of Education's board of trustees has approved the 2016-17 budget.

The CBE said the $1.3 billion budget supports student success while aligning with the CBE's values of students come first, learning is their central purpose, and public education serves the common good.

The budget is balanced with the use of $20 million in operating reserves.

Construction begins on affordable housing

Construction is set to begin on affordable housing in Edmonton which will give 230 people a home.

Alberta Housing Minister Lori Sigurdson says the 70-unit apartment building in the Parkdale community should be completed by 2017.

She says it's part of $14 mil-

If You Bought Sylvania Automotive Lighting You Could Get Money from a Class Action Settlement

Detailed information and updates are available on the Settlement Website:
www.autolightclaims.ca

A proposed Canada-wide Settlement has been negotiated in class actions relating to the marketing and sales of Osram Sylvania Premium Automotive Lighting. If approved by the Courts, this Settlement will provide benefits to purchasers of the following "Covered Products":

SilverStar ULTRA, SilverStar, XtraVision, or Cool Blue replacement headlight capsules

SilverStar, XtraVision, or Cool Blue sealed beam headlights

SilverStar fog or auxiliary lights

ARE YOU INCLUDED?

You may be a Class Member if you purchased a Covered Product in Canada from September 22, 2005 until December 31, 2014.

WHAT IS THIS CASE ABOUT?

The lawsuits claim that Osram Sylvania, Inc., Osram Sylvania Products, Inc. and Osram Sylvania, Ltd. ("Sylvania") misrepresented that certain replacement automotive lighting is brighter, provides a wider beam and allows drivers to see farther down the road than standard halogen lighting. It also claims that Sylvania omitted material information regarding the reduced life of the replacement lighting. Sylvania denies that it did anything wrong. The Courts did not decide which side was right. Instead, the parties have decided to settle.

WHAT DOES THIS SETTLEMENT PROVIDE?

A Settlement Amount of not less than CDN $1,150,000 (the "Settlement Fund Minimum") and not more than CDN $1,750,000 (the "Settlement Cap Maximum") is intended to pay claims to eligible Class Members, Notice Costs, Claims Administration Fees and Expenses, Class Counsel Fees and Expenses, and Honorarium Awards to the Representative Plaintiffs. In addition, Sylvania has also modified certain product(s) packaging. Full details about the Settlement are available on the Settlement Website at www.autolightclaims.ca.

WHAT TYPE OF COMPENSATION CAN YOU RECEIVE?

Individual Class Member may qualify for Compensation for one of the following, irrespective of how many products have been purchased:

Covered Products	Initial Amount	Maximum Amount
SilverStar ULTRA, SilverStar, XtraVision, or Cool Blue replacement headlight capsule	$12.00	$24.00
SilverStar, XtraVision, or Cool Blue sealed beam headlights	$12.00	$24.00
SilverStar fog or auxiliary lights	$12.00	$24.00

For each Claimant who submits a valid Claim, payment as described above will be issued¹, so long as providing such Compensation does not exceed the Settlement Cap Maximum. If providing each Claimant with such Compensation will exceed the Settlement Cap Maximum, then in such circumstances each Claimant's Compensation shall be reduced on a pro-rata basis.

HOW DO I ASK FOR A PAYMENT?

To receive Compensation, eligible Class Members must submit a Claim Form to the Claims Administrator through the Settlement Website, by email, or by mail. The Claim Form only takes 3-5 minutes to complete. No proof of purchase is necessary.

WHEN SHOULD I MAKE A CLAIM?

Immediately - the Claim Form is already available on the Settlement Website at www.autolightclaims.ca or you can obtain one by contacting the Claims Administrator at 1-855-745-7374. You should act as quickly as possible, ideally you should do so before the date of the Settlement Approval Hearings, which will further extend the deadline. A definite Claim Deadline will be set if and when the Settlement is approved by the Courts. Please consult the Settlement Website for an update of the delays that will be set by the Courts.

WHAT ARE YOUR OPTIONS?

If you are a Class Member, you may (1) send in a Claim Form; (2) object to the settlement; (3) exclude yourself (Opt-Out); or (4) do nothing.

If you don't want to be legally bound by the settlement, you must opt-out. To do so, you must complete and submit an Opt-Out Form to the Claims Administrator. The manner in which you opt-out is available on the form found on the Settlement Website; the delay to do so will be set by the Courts. Residents of Quebec must in addition give notice to the Clerk of the Superior Court of Quebec. Anyone who opts out cannot object to the Settlement, will not be bound by the Settlement Agreement, and will not be eligible to claim benefits under the Agreement, but may be eligible to pursue an individual claim.

To object to or to make representations regarding this proposed Settlement, you must attend one of the Settlement Approval Hearings. You should also notify the Claims Administrator in writing through the website, by email or by mail at least 15-days before the hearing and provide your reasons summarily.

WHEN AND WHERE WILL THE COURTS DECIDE TO APPROVE THE SETTLEMENT?

The Ontario Superior Court of Justice and the Superior Court of Québec will hold hearings to consider whether to approve the Settlement. Each of the Courts must be satisfied that the Settlement is fair, reasonable and in the best interests of Class Members.

Settlement Approval Hearings have been scheduled as follows:

Ontario Action (for Canadian residents other than Quebec) - August 31, 2016 at 9:30 A.M. at the Courthouse located at 1023 King St., L'Orignal, Ontario.

Quebec Action (for Quebec residents) - August 30, 2016 at 9:15 A.M. at the Montreal Courthouse located at 1 Notre-Dame St. East, Montréal, Québec.

Please check the Settlement Website to confirm these dates, as they are subject to change. You do not have to attend the hearings but you may do so if you wish. However, you must do so if you wish to object or make representations regarding the Settlement.

WHEN WILL I BE PAID?

Cheques will only begin to be mailed to eligible Class Members for Compensation at the earliest starting on January 29, 2017, assuming that the Settlement is approved and that such order/judgment has become final and binding.

HOW CAN I GET MORE INFORMATION?

This Notice summarizes the proposed Settlement. More details are in the Settlement Agreement. You can get a copy of the Settlement Agreement and detailed information on how to obtain or file a Claim, Opt-Out or Object on the Settlement Website at www.autolightclaims.ca. For any other information, please contact the Claims Administrator at:

Bruneau Group Inc.

Nelson P.O. 20187 - 322 Rideau St., Ottawa, Ontario K1N 5Y5

Tel: 1-855-745-7374 Email: info@autolightclaims.ca

WHO REPRESENTS ME?

Class Counsel, or the law firms representing the Plaintiffs, are the following:

Consumer Law Group P.C.

251 Laurier Ave. West, Suite 900, Ottawa, Ontario K1P 5J6

Email: jorenstein@clg.org

Consumer Law Group Inc.

1030 rue Berri, Suite 102, Montréal, Québec H2L 4C3

Email: agrass@clg.org

The Courts will also consider a request from Class Counsel for counsel fees, disbursements and taxes. Class Counsel has pursued this lawsuit wholly on a contingency basis and has agreed that they would only be paid their legal fees if there was a Settlement or recovery following a successful outcome. They will seek approval from the Courts of $525,000 plus applicable taxes, which will be paid for from the Settlement Amount. The Plaintiffs will also seek honorarium payments of $5,000 each.

To remain updated and to find out the deadlines to file a claim or opt-out, please consult the Settlement Website.

This Notice has been approved by the Ontario Superior Court of Justice and the Superior Court of Québec.

Program helping families to heal

INDIGENOUS ISSUES

Braiding the Sweetgrass addresses trauma

Lucie Edwardson
Metro | Calgary

Hull Services' Braiding the Sweetgrass (BTS) program is leading Aboriginal families towards healing, reconciliation and wellness by combining traditional aboriginal and Western methods.

Kathleen Hagan, the program director said BTS has been going on at Hull for three years now. She describes it as a "cultural program with a clinical lens." She said the program has been built with the help of indigenous elders who have helped make sure they can accomplish the program goals respectfully.

"It has to come from an indigenous world view and we had to ask ourselves how do we do this in a way that respects the culture and gets people to identify with it positively so they can begin to heal," she said.

Casey Eagle Speaker, Indigenous Resource Coordinator at Hull Services, Blackfoot elder and residential school survivor, has helped build the program since its outset.

He said he's drawn on the knowledge of indigenous people by creating a team of elders from different cultural backgrounds to talk about intergenerational trauma.

"Everything from colonization to residential schools and how trauma has been transitioned from one generation to the next," he said. "The elders are able to share their stories with them and how some of the behaviours being made aren't from the true nature of our culture — but became normalized through all those events."

Hagan said the name of the program came from the elders who explained that when you braid grass together it becomes stronger.

"We hope these families also feel stronger by learning together," she said.

The program happens twice a year and lasts four months. She said it consists of group meetings as well as home visits. Hagan said families have expressed positive outcomes.

"They've said they have started to understand how the impacts of trauma have affected their parents, their grandparents and in turn how it's trickled down and affected them and how they parent their kids."

ORPHAN OIL WELLS

Alberta tightens transfer rules

The Alberta Energy Regulator is making it tougher to transfer oil and gas well licences in view of a recent court ruling that allowed the buyer of a bankrupt company's assets to avoid acquiring wells with high environmental liabilities.

The AER says licence transfer applications will now be considered "non-routine" under temporary new measures.

It added that it will refuse to approve the transfer of AER licences, approvals and permits if the transaction results in the buyer's ratio of asset value to the cost of its environmental liabilities falling below a minimum level.

Gary Leach, president of the Explorers and Producers Association of Canada, says the new rules are a concern because they will reduce the number of qualified buyers.

But he added they may be necessary to avoid increasing liabilities for the Alberta orphan well fund, an industry financed fund that cleans up well sites for owners who can't or won't do it themselves.

He called on the regulator to use flexibility under the new rules, adding legislation may be the ultimate solution.

NATIONAL ABORIGINAL DAY

PM bathed in smoke, before paddling in canoe in river

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau was in vintage form Tuesday as he took part in a ceremony marking the 20th annual National Aboriginal Day.

Trudeau attended a sunrise ritual on the shore of the Ottawa River wearing moccasins and a buckskin jacket that the Prime Minister's Office said was owned by his father, the late Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

The former prime minister was known in his younger years for donning buckskin before venturing out on canoeing expeditions in Canada's far north.

As the sun rose beyond a bridge linking Quebec and Ontario, the younger Trudeau was bathed with a ceremonial smoke as part of a smudging ceremony before paddling beneath the Parliament Buildings in a 10-metre cargo canoe.

The federal government began observing National Aboriginal Day on June 21 two decades ago.

This year, the tribute in the national capital region took place outside Canada's Museum of History with several federal cabinet ministers and local MPs in attendance.

Trudeau didn't speak publicly at the event, but issued a statement in which he encouraged Canadians to learn more about the country's indigenous heritage.

"National Aboriginal Day is first and foremost an occasion to celebrate the fundamental role First Nations, Metis, and Inuit have played - and continue to play - in shaping the identity of all Canadians," the statement said.

"Coast to coast to coast, their remarkable art and cultures, significant contributions and history, are essential to our sense of nationhood."

Trudeau also pointed to a rash of recent suicides in some aboriginal communities, and the feelings of despair felt by some indigenous Canadians, as reasons for governments to "better support the well-being of children and families, improve the quality of education for indigenous students, and ensure health services meet the needs of indigenous communities."

Elsewhere in Ottawa, the Senate's Aboriginal Peoples committee opening its doors to 12 indigenous youth leaders from across Canada to hear their concerns about the future of their communities, their families and their people.

"This government is opening doors right now ... but I think a lot of our communities are still having that hopeful anxiety of ... 'Is (there) actually going to be action put forth,'" said 29-year-old Justin Holness, a member of Saskatchewan's Ocean Man First Nation.

"I still feel as though ... action needs to be implemented on a nationwide scale."

Suicide has been a long-standing problem for aboriginal communities, not a more recent phenomenon, added 18-year-old Shelby Angalik from Arviat, Nunavut.

"No one really likes to talk about it," she said.

"Suicide is what we go through all the time, not just now. The government focuses on what we put out (now) but there are a lot of issues we don't talk about ... drug abuse and substance abuse and mental health."

During last year's federal election, the Liberals campaigned on a platform that promised to boost support for Canada's indigenous peoples, and to launch a national public inquiry into missing and murdered indigenous women.

"This government has a lot to accomplish in a short amount of time and I hope they will be able to achieve the goals they have set out," said 25-year-old Caitlin Tolley, a third-year law student at the University of Ottawa who is from Quebec's Kitigan-Zibi First Nation.

Kijiji ad offers to sell baby

Luke Simcoe
Metro | Toronto

Toronto police are investigating after someone posted a Kijiji ad attempting to selling a two-month-old baby boy for $600.

The ad was posted to the classified website Monday but has since been removed. The case is being handled by the police department's cyber crimes unit.

"There's a high likelihood that this is someone who thinks this is funny, but it's something that needs to be investigated," Const. Craig Brister told Metro on Tuesday.

The baby's mother died "in the process" of giving birth, the ad claims.

"I can't take care of the baby myself, so I decided to post an ad up on Kijiji. The baby is male an unnamed," it reads. "I want $600 or best offer ... I just need this baby gone."

Screenshots of the ad circulating on social media evoked a strong response from users.

"This has to be a sick joke. I sincerely hope it is and if it isn't that baby is removed from the situation immediately," wrote one Facebook user.

Even if the post is a hoax, Brister said the author could be charged with mischief. However, it's likely they would just receive a warning, he said.

Calling all van Gogh lookalikes

ART & CULTURE

Artist launches worldwide search for doppelgangers

Matt Kieleyka
Metro | Vancouver

Do you, or someone you know, look like the second coming of Dutch painter Vincent van Gogh? If so, give Douglas Coupland a call.

The renowned Vancouver-based artist and author has launched a worldwide search for van Gogh look-alikes for his latest art piece.

"I'm learning that most people have someone in their life who looks like Vincent van Gogh. It could be your next-door neighbour. It could be the guy at work. It could be you," Coupland writes.

People are asked to submit their doppelganger photos to iamvincent.com. Coupland also plans to blog at the site and share the latest entries as they come in.

The person that most closely resembles van Gogh will be given 5,000 euros and flown to Vancouver (with a guest) to have their head 3D-scanned so Coupland can create a two-metre-by-three-metre bronze sculpture of the artist.

Strangely, the bust will be the first of many commissioned monumental outdoor works featuring redheads. The series, he said in a statement, recognizes "the most recent successful human mutation."

"This genetic magic is a microcosm of the way in which all life on Earth changes with time," he explains. "I'd like to trigger discussion about new relationships between science, art and globalization."

Doupland is no stranger to larger-than-life head sculptures. He installed a seven-foot bust of himself in front of the Vancouver Art Gallery in 2014 and encouraged people to stick their chewing gum onto it.

In four months, "Gumhead" had accumulated a quarter-million pieces of gum and then went on tour to Toronto, Sao Paulo and Brasilia.

Plans in the works to honour Sid the Kid

Zane Woodford
Metro | Halifax

Halifax regional council wants to name something after Sidney Crosby, but it's not yet sure what.

Council voted Tuesday to ask municipal staff to write a report on whether the Forest Hills Parkway can be renamed the Sidney Crosby Parkway, but many councillors argued it would be more appropriate to rename Cole Harbour Place after Crosby.

rather than the street.

The report will look at options for renaming both streets and municipal properties like Cole Harbour Place.

While they couldn't agree on what should bear Sid the Kid's name, all councillors were clear that they feel he should be honoured.

"I feel so proud to be able to say Sidney is ours," Coun. Gloria McCluskey said during the meeting.

"He's an ambassador, he's a mentor, he's so much more than just an athlete." Cole Harbour Coun. Lorelei Nicoll brought the motion forward after Crosby's former coach started the push last week.

She said she's heard feedback from people who don't want to lose the name Forest Hills Parkway, so she's open to anything that will recognize Crosby "in a significant way."

Municipal staff will report back to council on what needs to change to allow for the street renaming.

Referendum closing in as Cameron tries to sway voters

From the prime minister to sports and pop icons David and Victoria Beckham, supporters of Britain staying in the European Union urged voters Tuesday to think about future generations when they cast ballots in a referendum that has divided the nation.

With the black door of 10 Downing St. offering a statesman's backdrop, Cameron appealed directly to EU-wary older voters, saying that leaving the bloc would risk the country's economic security — and younger generations would have to live with the consequences.

"Do think about the hopes and dreams of your children and grandchildren," he said. "They can't undo the decision we take," he said. "If we vote out, that's it. It's irreversible."

The plea came as the already heated campaign moved into its tense final days. Opponents said the statement outside the prime minister's residence betrayed Cameron's worry that the referendum he called to settle Britain's place in Europe could end with the country walking away from the bloc.

for votes.

Cameron seemed to direct his appeal at those who grew up in the after-shadow of Britain's imperial period, in a nation that had stood against Nazi tyranny during World War II. Polls suggest these voters, many of them Conservatives, are more likely than younger Britons to reject the pan-European EU project.

Cameron tried to assure them that Britain remains a great country — even if it is part of a 28-nation bloc — and that being in the EU allows the country to promote the values it holds dear.

"Brits don't quit," he said. "We get involved, we take a lead. We make a difference. We get things done."

Cameron acknowledged that many Britons didn't vote for him and don't like him.

The "remain" camp also got a boost from more popular — and populist — figures when soccer star David Beckham and his designer wife Victoria added their voices to the EU cause.

"For our children and their children, we should be facing the problems of the world together and not alone," he said. Former Spice Girl Victoria Beckham later registered her view by posting the symbol of the "Stronger In" campaign on her Instagram page.

The "Leave.EU" group had suggested that Victoria Beckham was a supporter of their side based on a 1996 interview with The Spectator in which she was quoted as deriding Brussels bureaucrats and saying that "we must keep our national individuality." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.S. SENATE

Obama denounces failure on gun deal

President Barack Obama is denouncing the Senate's failure to pass gun control measures in the aftermath of the mass shooting in Orlando, Florida.

Obama says on Twitter that the Senate failed the American people and that gun violence requires more than moment of silence. The White House has said previously that tweets from his account are from Obama himself.

White House spokesman Josh Earnest says the vote is "a shameful display of cowardice." He told CNN on Tuesday that the Republican-led chamber's blocking of four gun control proposals Monday does nothing to keep extremists from acquiring guns.

Earnest said lawmakers lament gun violence but "don't do anything about it." He said that while no bill can prevent all gun violence, "why wouldn't we do more?"

Elsewhere Tuesday, a moderate Republican senator sought broad bipartisan support for a compromise to block gun purchases by some suspected terrorists.

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell said he would allow a vote on the proposal by Sen. Susan Collins, but stopped short of endorsing the measure itself. The package seemed to face an uphill climb for the 60 votes it would need, thanks to the hurdles of election-year politics and opposition from the National Rifle Association and Gun Owners of America.

If we can't pass this, it truly is a broken system up here," said Sen. Lindsey Graham.

Jordan shuts borders to refugees after attack

Jordan sealed its last entry point for Syrian refugees Tuesday after a cross-border suicide attack killed six members of the Jordanian security forces, wounded 14 and exposed the pro-Western kingdom's growing vulnerability to spillover from the conflict.

The closure raised questions about the fate of thousands of Syrian refugees who are stranded in desert areas along the border, who depend on food and water from the Jordanian side.

Jordan said its security comes first. Government spokesman Mohammed Momani said Jordan had warned for months that militants are mingling with refugees in the two rapidly expanding encampments on the border and pose a serious security threat.

"The border will be closed," Momani told reporters. "We will not allow the crossing of people or vehicles through that area." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Iraqi forces don't control all of Fallujah

IRAQ

Most of cleared terrain in south of city, U.S.-led coalition says

Only a third of Fallujah has been "cleared" of Daesh militants, the U.S.-led coalition said Tuesday, days after the Iraqi government declared victory in the city west of Baghdad, which was held by the extremists for more than two years.

Other parts of the city are "contested," said U.S. Army Col. Christopher Garver, the Baghdad-based spokesman for the coalition, with clashes underway between Iraqi forces and Daesh fighters. Most of the cleared terrain is in the south of the city, and "clearing operations continue outward from the city centre," Garver added.

Iraqi forces pushed into the centre of Fallujah on Friday, retaking a government complex and the central hospital. That evening Brig. Gen. Haider al-Obedi, with Iraq's special forces, told The Associated Press his troops controlled 80 per cent of the city.

Iraqi Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi said Friday that Fallujah had "returned to the embrace of the nation," and that remaining Daesh pockets would be "cleaned out within hours."

But in recent days there have been persistent clashes between Iraqi forces and Daesh fighters holed up in dense residential neighbourhoods along the city's northern edge.

"What it looks like is (a Daesh) defensive belt around the city with not-as-stiff defences inside," Garver said.

Fake suicide belt sparks alert at mall

A man claiming to have been kidnapped and outfitted with a bomb belt shut down a section of central Brussels during the Tuesday morning rush hour, but a bomb squad found only salt and cookies in the belt, the Brussels prosecutor's office said.

The man, identified only as J.B., was taken in for questioning. Prosecutors said he had a criminal record and a history of psychiatric problems.

Brussels prosecutor Rym Kechiche said authorities were investigating whether the incident around the City 2 shopping mall had links to terrorism or whether it was a hoax.

A second man, who is suspected of driving J.B. to the scene, was also being questioned.

J.B. phoned police at 5:30 a.m., saying he had been abducted and fitted with an explosive device that could be detonated remotely by another person, Kechiche said.

J.B. recently informed police that he had been enlisted to join the Daesh extremist organization in Syria, but Brussels prosecutors weren't able to prove or disprove his claim, Kechiche said.

A car corresponding to a detailed description the man gave police was found parked in a street in the Schaerbeek area of Brussels.

Amid the alert, Prime Minister Charles Michel changed his morning program and a meeting of the Belgian crisis centre was called.

Crisis centre spokesman Peter Mertens said the nation's security alert was not changed.

"That level, and the measures accompanying it, is already high," Mertens said. "The situation of this morning has no impact on the existing measures."

Protester says Christians responsible for attack

A gay-rights protester has accused evangelicals who met with Donald Trump in New York on Tuesday of stirring up hatred that she says led to the nightclub shootings in Orlando.

The woman disrupted a press conference that included leaders of the Family Research Council, a conservative Christian group, shouting: "Your hate is killing us. Your lies are killing us. You all are responsible for the hateful environment that created the attack in Orlando."

Gunman Omar Mateen had expressed sympathy for Islamic extremists before his rampage left 49 people dead.

At the news conference, Family Research Council President Tony Perkins said, "No American, regardless of your political ideology or your life choices, should be living under the threat of a terrorist attack on the streets of the United States of America."

Swift deal on pensions

RETIREMENT

In terms of policy-making, change came in blink of an eye

In two and a half years, Canadians will gradually start paying more premiums into the Canada Pension Plan.

In several decades, supporters say the "historic" CPP deal reached Monday between Ottawa and most provinces will boost retirement security for future generations.

But by policy-making standards, the agreement-in-principle happened in the blink of an eye.

Even the federal finance minister, a pension expert, had given himself until the end of the year to finish up negotiations.

Instead, the provinces are now being asked to finalize an agreement by July 15 that will eventually increase contributions and retirement benefits through the public plan.

Following weeks of talks and an all-day meeting in Vancouver on Monday, finance ministers emerged with the agreement-in-principle.

Even provinces such as Saskatchewan and British Columbia, which had expressed concerns about the timing of CPP reform, had signed on. Only Manitoba and Quebec declined to agree to the terms.

The agreement came together as pollsters pointed to overwhelming popular support for public pension reform.

The federal Liberals ran on platform to upgrade the public pension system, as did their Ontario cousins.

How did this all happen so quickly?

Sources familiar with the talks said doubters had concerns about the potential economic impact of boosting the CPP. They said Ottawa made a major push in the final days and hours, which helped secure enough country-wide support. To make the change, they needed consent of a minimum of seven provinces.

The sources also suggested Prime Minister Justin Trudeau himself was involved in the extra effort.

On top of that, Ontario, which had been moving forward its more-ambitious pension plan proposal, backed away from its earlier demands that CPP reform should be just as robust.

Ontario Finance Minister Charles Sousa said in an interview

Monday after the announcement that the swift agreement was driven by several factors.

Sousa said all of his counterparts agreed there were "under-saving issues." He also said that Ontario's proposed pension plan - and its parameters - gave ministers around the table an example to examine.

And some provinces, especially those hit hard by the commodity-price shock, were looking for only a gradual implementation due to the fragile economy, Sousa added.

Market in a shipping container

Wanyee Li
Metro | Vancouver

A Vancouver chef and entrepreneur is creating a new public food market made out of shipping containers that aims to help customers connect with local makers of food, from farmers to chefs.

The project is the brainchild of Chris Jerome, founder of Hawkers Market, a series of popup events he describes as "underground food markets." But Hawkers Wharf will be a permanent 100,000-square-foot waterfront site and feature more than 40 food producers at any given time, said Jerome.

"They're all local businesses, they're all from Vancouver, all focused on very traceable foods," he said.

"They're encouraged to do their food in a sustainable way. That's one of the mandates of the market."

The site will also feature an incubator kitchen for chefs to connect and test out their products before bringing the product to customers.

"It's such a needed resource in the city where new food businesses can come and they can connect and they can learn from other cooks."

The incubator, called a co-working kitchen, will support entrepreneurial chefs who want to start their own product line.

"People looking for places to take their ideas to and then create a business out of it and then also get the customer sales and validation."

Shipping containers have been used to create housing in Vancouver, but Jerome wanted to take that idea one step further and create an entire marketplace with the modular structures. The containers are easily customizable and can suit any restaurateur's needs, whether they make tacos or pizzas, he said.

"The reason why we chose shipping containers is because these are modular template businesses that can be operated by food entrepreneurs."

Decommissioned shipping containers are also economical building blocks that are easily transportable.

"We treat them very much like Lego blocks."

Latte lawsuit to proceed

A federal judge is allowing the bulk of a lawsuit accusing Starbucks of systematically under-filling lattes to move forward.

Two California residents are suing the coffee chain, claiming that Starbucks lattes are only filled to about 75 per cent of the cup's capacity.

The lawsuit says Starbucks instituted a recipe in 2009 to create smaller lattes in order to save money on milk.

Starbucks spokesman Reggie Borges says that the company believes the lawsuit is "without merit" and it will be prepared to defend itself in court. He says if a customer is unhappy with their beverage, Starbucks "will gladly remake it." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROSEMARY WESTWOOD ON HOW TO BE A WIFE

SO NOW WHAT WILL 'I DO'?

I've spent my adult life identifying as an uncompromising feminist, but in preparing for marriage and its innumerable compromises, I'm forced to figure out how to pick my battles

It's a strange thing to be on the brink of "wife."

Over the last two years, as I have fallen in love and become engaged, I've had to face the idea of marriage, an institution which, though released from its former function as a means of owning a woman or legally raping her, remains awkward for the liberated woman.

There seem to be three in this relationship: Myself, my fiancé, and my feminism. And while the latter played a clear and dominating role when I was a single woman, it has seemed unequipped for — even hostile to — love.

That has sparked a genuine period of panic and doubt: How does one square her feminism with "the wife"?

Statistics don't help. Excepting her new book, All the Single Ladies, in New York magazine this spring, Rebecca Traister detailed how married women's earnings in the U.S. trail single women's by a wide margin. In Canada, married men out-earned married women by nearly $20,000 on average in 2008. And for couples with kids, even when both parents are working, Canadian women in 2010 were spending at least 20 hours a week more than men on unpaid child care.

This is not far from where we were a decade ago. In 2004, in her book The Meaning of Wife, the writer Anne Kingston described how wifeliness remained a useful tool to define women, and to shame and coerce them into socially acceptable roles.

"A lot of the themes haven't really changed, in fact they've kind of amplified," Kingston told me

There are opportunities in intimate life. I can't fix societal expectations. But I can influence the structures of my own marriage.

recently during a chat for my new podcast, called Nth Wave. Among them: The wedding-industrial complex, which sells marriage as a woman's ultimate dream; the battle over women's unpaid and undervalued domestic work; and the denunciation of singleness as innately selfish. Never mind the new era of fetishized kept women. "I couldn't have imagined the Real Housewives franchise," she said with a laugh.

Kingston told me that when she was writing the book she was really fascinated by what she saw as a calcified notion of what a wife was.

"Women I knew didn't want to become wives, wife was a dirty word, yet at the same time most women became wives and are wives."

Around that time, I was graduating high school and heading to university. I had been assuming feminism was a dead cause, as I foolishly told one professor. It's a story I think of often, because of how unnervingly little I knew about what I didn't know.

My professor was non-plussed, responding with something to the effect of, "Just you wait," and planting doubt. In one political science course, feminist theory took up a thin, measly chapter, and I noticed. In third year, I took a queer studies class that sent me into furious debates with my poor father, whom I forced to be a foil for the epiphanies tossed out in class.

I had been that girl who fought boys on other girls' behalf, and I became that woman who took every chance to fight what I saw as the patriarchy.

In my ensuing years as a single feminist, it was me-against-the-world, and I never noticed how often feminism itself was framed in that hyper-individualized, confrontational way.

The message was always to guard against lurking sexism. To expect to not only to fight for your own place in the world, but also to then defend it fiercely. To not give an inch — let alone your whole self.

A marriage, however, can't operate like a war zone. Giving in, even giving up, will be required, because it's a community.

And feminism, particularly the form of it that's ascendant in our society right now, focused as it is on fighting poverty and sexual violence and illuminating the intersections of race and class, doesn't offer much help.

The very word, "wife," as Kingston said during our conversation, still holds that "beta" connotation. And as I set out to become one, what concerns me most is how I might, somewhere down deep, believe in that connotation myself.

What does an "equal" marriage even look like? And if the women at Harvard, and women everywhere really, could enter into relationships expecting equality and then still find that they make less money, do far more chores or end up with half-realized careers — how could I possibly assume I'd escape the same fate?

Perhaps I won't. But there are opportunities in intimate life. I can't fix societal expectations. But I can influence the structures of my own marriage.

It's an act of faith and hope I'm willing to take, for love. I believe I can choose my own definition of wife. I can imagine a more egalitarian family.

Others already are. This week, the Journal of Marriage and Family released details of a new study that found couples with a "more egalitarian division of labour" have more sex.

Here's hoping equality always feels that good.

The battle of the buckskins

Early Tuesday morning, Prime Minister Justin Trudeau participated in a canoe ride wearing a buckskin jacket that the PMO said belonged to the PM's father, Pierre Trudeau. The elder Trudeau, we scarcely need remind you, made a signature out of the buckskin look: The image of Pierre rocking tan fringe while paddling a canoe on some remote Canadian waterway is this country's answer to John F. Kennedy and his family at the compound in Hyannis Port. Political considerations aside, we left it to you, the readers, to settle the equally important sartorial question.

We asked: Who wore the buckskin better?

70%: Pierre

He's the OG. Justin's nothing but a damswagger jacker.

Justin hasn't found his swagger yet

Justin is very open and adorable...he looks great in anything he wears!

Pierre is just doing it. Justin's is a self-conscious photo op.

Look at the way Pierre is wearing it ... with style! The jacket isn't wearing him, he's wearing the jacket!

Most of us can never live up to our dads. No matter how hard we try.

PT was a hard act to follow but JT is the best of both his parents.

SHOW YOUR PRIDE TASTE THE RAINBOW

There are more ways to “taste the rainbow” than with a package of vending machine candy. Why not a bagel? Or on the top of a morning latte? Yes, LGBTQ Pride season is in full swing across Canada, with Calgary Pride kicking off Aug. 26, but that doesn’t mean you can’t enjoy these colourful treats all year long. Here are a few to inspire you. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

1 Bagels

New York’s The Bagel Store unearthed the rainbow food trend this year when it went viral online for the “rainbow bagel.” Owner Scot Rossillo and his team flatten neon-coloured mounds of dough on top of each other, then slice and roll them into bagel circles. Earlier this year, The Bagel Store was selling up to 800 of the brightly coloured bagels each day. Inspired by the success of its fellow bagel maker to the south, Montreal shop REAL Bagel Inc. now serves rainbow bagels, too. And on the west coast, Vancouver’s Rosemary Rocksalt is adding colour to its repertoire.

2 Lattes

Caffeinate with some flare and order some rainbow latte art, colourful designs made with food dye added to steamed milk. Stuart Ross of Bull Dog Coffee near Church and Gerrard streets in Toronto has been pouring colourful flowers and hearts since April, inspired by Las Vegas coffee shop Sambalatte.

3 Cake

Cake is a Pride staple. Wanda’s Pie in the Sky on Augusta Ave. in Toronto will be offering rainbow cakes and cupcakes at its Kensington Market shop. The treats, dressed with sprinkles and covered in a white buttercream frosting or chocolate ganache, have seven layers, each with a different flavour and colour. Want to try making it at home? MarthaStewart.com has a great recipe for a six-layer rainbow cake with a buttercream ice cream.

4 Grilled cheese

Forget bottled food colouring. The chefs at Grill My Cheese in London, England, opt for beetroot, arugula, roasted onion, goat cheese and truffle oil to make their oozy rainbow grilled cheese.

5 Hot dogs

Throw a sausage fest with a dough-wrapped hot dog rainbow. Blogger Beth Jackson Klosterboer with Hungry Happenings covered diced hot dogs in Pillsbury croissant dough sheets brightened with food colouring. She curled the rows into a rainbow shape and put a “pot of gold” dish of mustard at the end.

NUTRITION

New research points to the problem of 'social jetlag'

Genna Buck
Metro Canada

You grab a granola bar on the way out the door, eat a yogurt instead of lunch, then finally tuck into a proper dinner and half a bag of chips after you stumble home at 9 p.m. Sound familiar?

Irregular eating patterns because of busy, unpredictable work and school schedules are a reality for many across the Western world, including Canadians. They may be causing "social jetlag": disturbances in the internal body clock, also called the circadian rhythm. Many processes your body uses to break down and use energy from food are part of the circadian clock, following a predictable daily cycle.

New research suggests messing with that cycle — by eating and sleeping willy-nilly — could be a recipe for health problems.

Two papers published Tuesday in the journal Proceedings of the Nutrition Society collect past studies about how the timing of meals throughout the day affects overall health.

One looked at the impact of erratic eating on heart health and metabolism. The other investigated how the timing of meals impacts people's ability to maintain a healthy weight.

The conclusions were tentative. More research is needed. But the findings boil down to this: Some old-fashioned nutrition wisdom dispensed by grandmas everywhere turns out to be right.

Firstly, three square meals a day might just keep the doctor away. Two studies that randomized participants to either an irregular or regular diet found the regular eaters had lower peak insulin and lower "bad" cholesterol, indicators of heart health.

Secondly, according to nutrition scientist and study author Gerda Pot, "There seems to be some truth in the saying 'Eat breakfast like a king, lunch like a prince and dinner like a pauper': Studies suggest a clear link between obesity and consuming more calories later at night.

In the U.K. and U.S. — global obesity hotspots — most people increase their calorie intake through the day. The slimmer French tend to eat larger lunches and small dinners.

The collected studies also contained no evidence that eating small meals throughout the day, a common dieting tip, reduces obesity. In fact, it seems the opposite is true.

So science says we should eat fewer meals, on a regular schedule, and get more of our calories earlier in the day. Here's a delicious thought: One weapon against the obesity crisis may just be brunch.

HEALTH CARE

Diet advice, just for the ladies

Do women need a special food guide just for them? The Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology of Canada seems to think so.

It published a 65-page guide for health-care providers about giving nutrition advice to women.

The collaboration between dozens of experts and professional associations contains a lot of common-sense advice: telling doctors to promote "a balanced and varied diet higher in vegetables, fruit, whole grains," and reminding them that "Sensitivity is required ... in terms of language used to communicate with patients about their weight."

The guide includes updated research on the relationship between heart disease and saturated fat intake (it's not as strong as once believed) and focuses heavily on nutrition as it relates to reproductive health. It recommends pregnant and nursing women get enough folate, calcium, vitamin D and beneficial fats from fish.

Shouldn't doctors know this stuff already?

Well, yes. But as obvious as some of these recommendations seem, recent research has suggested there's room for improvement in the amount of nutrition education primary care providers, such as family doctors, get during their training. GENNA BUCK/METRO

CIDERS TO QUENCH YOUR SUMMER THIRST

What's old is brewed again: The drink of summer 2016 has a very 1716 feel to it. Humble apple cider, the brew of choice during Canada's pioneer days, is back in a big way. The naturally gluten-free fermented fruit drink, often called hard cider in North America, is hydrating, bubbly and slightly sweet. Here are five rising cider stars. GENNA BUCK/METRO GENNA.BUCK@METRONEWS.CA

1 Rock Creek Dry Apple Cider

From: Alberta
Alcohol: 5.5%
This fruity, fragrant, not-too-bubbly cider is a favourite on the west coast and the Prairies. Its notes of vanilla and cinnamon pair perfectly with cheeses like cheddar, gouda and brie and the smoky flavours of pulled pork or sausages.

2 B.C. Tree Fruits Apple&Hops

From: B.C.
Alcohol: 6%
This rising star from B.C. is hopping on the trend of adding hops to cider for a fusion of bitter beeriness with sweet cider taste. It's dry and tart with a creamy gold colour and hints of grapefruit.

3 Pommies Dry cider

From: Ontario
Alcohol: 5%
Pommies is a light, crisp refreshing summer alternative to white wine or coolers. It goes down easily with summer fruits and makes an intriguing addition to a bellini with your favourite cognac-based fruit liqueur.

4 Brickworks Queen Street 501

From: Ontario
Alcohol: 5%
As Toronto's Brickworks Ciderhouse was recently bought by the big-box Canadian Mill Street Brewery, this slightly sweeter cider is showing up in more stores than ever. Its flavour, with notes of honey, is perfect for summer sipping on the patio and makes a refreshing alternative to dessert wine.

5 William's Sir Perry Pear Cider

From: U.K.
Alcohol: 6%
Don't like them apples very much? Try a fruity import from across the pond. Very bubbly and fairly sweet, this pear cider with hints of peach and apple tastes best over lots of ice.

11 CIDER'S SWEET RISE

"Cider is in this perfect position between craft beer and wine," said Thomas Wilson, chair of the Ontario Craft Cider Association.

Wine is too strong for many, he said, and beer makes a lot of people feel bloated. But cider hits that sweet spot, clocking in between 3 and 10 per cent alcohol by volume.

Sales of craft cider have grown by 54 per cent over the past year just in Ontario. For a long time, cider just wasn't cool. "It was what farm workers drank after work," Wilson said. Now the trend's reversed. "People are getting away from fine dining," Wilson said, in favour of "pub peasant food" that goes great with cider.

HERE'S WHY

Equivalent to two Arby's Regular Roast Beef Sandwiches in fat.

These salads are classic pairings for burgers and hot dogs at summer BBQs. As tasty as a creamy potato salad is, it's one to skip — the mayo-based dressing packs on the fat and calories; it also won't last long in the summer heat. When picking a coleslaw, make sure it's in an oil & vinegar-based slaw. This way you're only getting a third of the fat and about half the calories.

JOHANNA SCHNELLER WHAT I'M WATCHING

Justified's dialogue is a character all its own

THE SHOW: Justified, Season 5, Episode 4 on Shomi
THE MOMENT: The conversating

U.S. Deputy Marshal Raylan Givens (Timothy Olyphant) enters the bar owned by his old frenemy, career criminal Boyd Crowder (Walton Goggins). "I'm afraid you caught us with a closed sign up," Boyd says.

"Allow me a moment to collect my wits such to reply," Raylan says. "I'm overcome trying to factor how many weapons you, a felon, are armed with."

"I'm not armed as such," Boyd protests. "Just transporting this legally procured hunting implement from point A to point B."

"We have a more pressing concern," Raylan says. "I understand Wade Messer worked principally for you."

"Your use of the past tense gives me some sense of foreboding," Boyd says.

"The man's wandered some off the radar," Raylan says.

"And what leads you to surmise he has continued affiliation

Raylan Givens (Timothy Olyphant) in Justified. CONTRIBUTED

with me?" Boyd asks.

This conversating (as folks 'round here call it) meanders on for some while. Eventually it lands on what Raylan wants, Messer's cellphone number.

On other shows, this scene would be two lines long. But Justified comes most deliciously alive when these two are in a room together, circling each other like lazy mountain lions. It's the Olympics of who can draw more softly, spin prettier prevarications, eyeball each other more calmly.

Nothing establishes Justified's backwoods Kentucky mise-en-scène better than its dialogue. Right away, you know who its characters are: people who don't read many books but have one in common, the Bible. Their affiliations are tribal, but they speak the language of sermons. Their dialogue is a character all its own.

Johanna Schneller is a media connoisseur who zeroes in on pop-culture moments. She appears Monday through Thursday.

REVIEW

Beetle Denim channels the 1970s

Mike Goetz
For Metro Canada

You're just heading out in your Canadian Tuxedo, a.k.a. blue jeans paired with a denim jacket, but something's wrong. You're thinking maybe you need more cowbell, but that's not it. Then it dawns on you. You have a fever, and the only prescription is more denim!

Enter the special edition 2016 VW Beetle Denim. Just what the doctor ordered.

It may not have actual denim anywhere near it, but the spirit of the fabric is what it's all about.

Witness the Stonewash Blue Metallic paint job, the convertible top and seat covers that mimic the look of denim, seat-back pockets that look like the pockets on your favourite pair of jeans (right down to the red tab), and the colour co-ordinated "brushed aluminum" look dashboard.

The exterior has been tweaked to take you back to that groovy time back in 1970s, when denim ruled every-day fashion, like a casual dictator.

Check out those '70s-era "dog dish" wheels.

All this extra nostalgia plied on a nameplate already rampant with nostalgia could have been a kitschy disaster, but the Denim is one of the best looking "new" Beetles models out there, at least to these eyes, and to the eyes of my significant other, who is usually ambivalent about any vehicle design, no matter what the vehicle genre or price point. ("That? That costs eighty grand? No thank you.")

Underneath the denim treatment is a standard VW Beetle convertible, and that means a decent, but not an overwhelming driving and handling experience, a pretty tight rear seat, restricted rearward vision, and a very small trunk, which is further compromised by its responsibility to house the back cover that goes over the roof when it's down.

The seats are very comfortable and supportive, and the new touch screen, rear camera, and apps for Android Auto and Apple Car Play, give the Denim a very modern and classy feel behind the wheel.

The Denim is meant to be a fun, and the fun goes up several notches whenever you press the button that powers the roof down — in less than 10 seconds.

When it's that easy and quick to get the roof down and up, you'll surely do more open-air motoring than you would otherwise.

New Ghostbusters wheels are deadly

2025 DEADLINE

Norway to make gas-powered cars illegal

One country is making the move to ban sales of gasoline-powered vehicles. According to a new report, Norway's four main political parties have come to an agreement on a new energy policy that would result in a ban of gasoline-powered car sales as early as 2025. Making the law even more interesting is the fact that Norway is currently one of the world's largest oil exporters. JASON SIU/AUTOGUIDE.COM

Ghostbusters' new ride a hearse

There are a lot of new things happening with the upcoming Ghostbusters movie. Along with an all-female cast for its main characters, the new Ghostbusters will change how you see Ecto-1 for years to come. The original movies used a 1959 Cadillac ambulance, and the new Ecto-1 comes in the form of a 1982 Cadillac hearse. In a way, it's quite the opposite from the previous Ecto-1, considering an ambulance's main priority is to save people from dying, while a hearse transports people who are already dead. The story goes that the new team gets a hold of the hearse, which is borrowed from Patty Tolan's (Leslie Jones) uncle, who runs a funeral home. JASON SIU/AUTOGUIDE.COM

CLUBMAN ALL4 SCRAMBLER

MINI concept shows off-road attitude

MINI wants you to head off-road in its latest concept, the Clubman ALL4 Scrambler. The little off-road wagon takes its inspiration from the BMW R Ninet Scrambler motorcycle, giving it a ready-for-adventure look thanks in part to a slightly lifted suspension. Large, knobby off-road tires are fitted along with a luggage rack to make sure you can cart your belongings with you into the wilderness. The car is finished in Frozen Gray, also borrowed from the BMW motorcycle, while circular headlights are a direct nod to that model. STEPHEN ELMER/AUTOGUIDE.COM

+ IN BRIEF

2016 Chevy Malibu Aces IIHS Crash Tests

The 2016 Chevy Malibu has been named a Top Safety Pick Plus by the U.S.-based non-profit Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS). The car scored the top "good" rating in all of the crash test categories, including in the tough small overlap test. To gain the "Plus" moniker, a car must score at least an "advanced" rating for front crash prevention, which the Malibu exceeded with a "superior" rating. In testing, the Malibu totally avoided a collision when run at an obstacle at 19 km/h. STEPHEN ELMER/AUTOGUIDE.COM

Customer satisfaction a longstanding tradition

Car dealership owner proud of building thriving business based on the Golden Rule

"My father had been a used car dealer in Calgary for many years and I grew up in that environment but knew next to nothing about the new car business. So when I had the Datsun opportunity, I knew it would be a steep learning curve and my best chance at success would be to hire experienced people with great character, give them a philosophy to work by, and then motivate them to practice it all the time, every time. It's a philosophy that was handed down from my father — you've got to treat people the way you want to be treated. It's the Golden Rule."

That focus on customer satisfaction, which permeates every aspect of how the business is run, has delivered. Brasso Nissan has been the leading seller of Nissans Canada-wide, several times over the years. It also received the prestigious Nissan World Leader Award in 2008.

"Over the years, we've had over 1,000 employees," Brasso said. "Somehow all of those employees, bless their hearts, bought into that theory and they were committed to doing it each and every day."

The dealership got its start when Brasso purchased a local Datsun dealership in 1969. Currently, the business sells more than 1,000 new cars a year and more than 700 used.

Brasso has long believed in the value of supporting the community. You can find Brasso's

Hockey heating up in American Southwest

NHL

Top prospect a product of expansion into Arizona

About a year before Auston Matthews was born, professional hockey arrived in Arizona.

He took in his first Coyotes game as a two-year-old, and his gaze never strayed far from the ice.

"From a young age," Matthews said, "I wanted to be an NHL hockey player."

Learning to skate might never be a top-of-the-bucket-list item for the youth of the American Southwest, with a prohibitive climate and a scant tradition, but hockey has been on the rise in the Phoenix area since the franchise relocated from Winnipeg in 1996. The team has struggled financially, with attendance at the suburban arena in Glendale frequently landing near the bottom of the league, but the embodiment of the sport's expansion will be on stage Friday at the NHL draft.

Matthews is expected to be the first pick by the Toronto Maple Leafs.

"It's what you think about since you were a little kid," said Matthews, a six-foot-two, 210-pound centre who joined the U.S. national team development program three years ago and spent the past season as an 18-year-old with Zurich in Switzerland's top professional league.

He could have picked baseball, which his father played in college, but the presence of the Coyotes spawned an admiration of players like Danny Briere and Shane Doan and an appreciation for the Zamboni. Matthews was on a travelling team by age eight, heading to tournaments in Chicago, Detroit and Canada where the game is a well-established pastime.

"A lot of people, when they hear you play hockey and you're from Arizona, kind of have this mindset where they don't even think there's hockey down there," Matthews said, "but I never really thought about it too much as far as that goes. I always had a goal to make the NHL. It doesn't matter where you're playing."

Engelland: Vegas is 'like any other city'

Deryk Engelland GETTY IMAGES

The bright lights, endless buffets and blackjack tables of the Las Vegas Strip get old pretty quick, according to Calgary Flames defenceman Deryk Engelland.

If anyone understands what the NHL might look like in the Nevada desert it's Engelland, who's lived in Vegas with his family for the last 12 years.

Born in Edmonton, but raised in a tiny northern B.C., town, Engelland got his first taste of the city as a 21-year-old playing for the now-extinct Las Vegas Wranglers of the ECHL. At first he was intrigued by the excitement of the city, and the Strip specifically.

"But you come here and (that part) gets old really fast," said the 34-year-old Engelland. "You learn the city and places to go and places not to go. I think it's just like any other city."

NHL players will soon get a taste of Vegas life with the league's board of governors expected to approve an expansion team for the city Wednesday.

NHL coaches believe the nightlife question will have to be addressed, especially the first time through.

"I flew in here and I'm going: 'How would I handle this?'" said Barry Trotz, the Washington Capitals head coach and nominee for the Jack Adams Trophy. "It'll be very hard to keep teams focused the first time through." THE CANADIAN PRESS

MMA

St-Pierre says he's ready to fight again

Former UFC welterweight champion Georges St-Pierre says he's ready to return to the octagon.

The 35-year-old Canadian fighter told the podcast MMA Hour that he's ready to come out of retirement in an interview on Monday.

St-Pierre said things still need to be ironed out with the UFC, however.

He hasn't fought in three years since beating Johnny Hendricks for his ninth straight welterweight title defence.

St-Pierre stepped away from the octagon after that fight.

He then tore his ACL in 2014.

"I'm an emotional guy," St-Pierre said. "My agents, even before I came on the show today, they briefed me. They said, 'don't say this, don't say that.' They briefed me, they said, 'we're in negotiations, remember, blah, blah, blah.'"

"I'm not trying to go overboard with this," he added.

"I love my sport and I still feel I'm at my best right now," St-Pierre said on the podcast.

"The clock is running. I'm not getting any younger. I'm in the peak of my career and if there is a shot, there is another goal, another run, I better do it and do it quick, because it is time to do it now."

UFC

Wonderboy jumps to top of rankings

Stephen (Wonderboy) Thompson has replaced Rory (Red King) MacDonald as the UFC's No. 1 welterweight contender after his weekend win over the Canadian.

MacDonald (18-4-0) fell to No. 2 in the rankings.

Thompson (13-1-0) won a unanimous five-round decision over MacDonald, a native of Kelowna, B.C., who fights out of Montreal, on Saturday in Ottawa.

MacDonald's future with the UFC is uncertain given the Thompson fight was the last on his current contract. He may also need surgery to repair a broken nose. THE CANADIAN PRESS

IN BRIEF

NHL salary cap rises to $73M

The salary cap for the 2016-17 NHL season will be $73 million, up from $71.4 million.

The league and NHL Players' Association announced the cap number Tuesday night.

The cap floor, or the minimum amount a team can spend, is $54 million. It was $52.8 million last season.

The Canadian dollar was one reason why league revenues sagged, preventing a larger cap increase.

EURO 2016
GROUP STAGE

Croatian jubilation

Ivan Perisic scored in the 87th minute as Croatia stunned Spain in a 2-1 comeback victory Tuesday to finish atop of Group D at the European Championship.

Perisic's winning goal gave Croatia its first victory over Spain in 22 years and ended its unbeaten run at a European Championship that stretched back to 2004.

"The team spirit helped us and we were fighting until the last minute," Perisic said through a translator. "I think we can go far now. If we play like this we can go to the very end."

Defeat means that Spain will now meet Italy in the round of 16 at the Stade de France in Saint-Denis. Croatia will play one of the third-place teams in the northern French city of Lens.

It had all started so well for Spain, when striker Alvaro Morata put his side ahead in the seventh minute, redirecting the ball into the net after a shot by midfielder Cesc Fabregas.

Nikola Kalinic equalized just before halftime with a nice back-heel flick that beat Spain goalkeeper David De Gea at the near post after Perisic delivered the cross from the left.

In Tuesday's other Group D matchup, Turkey defeated Czech Republic 2-0. Meanwhile in Group C, Germany beat Northern Ireland 1-0 and Poland earned a 1-0 victory over Ukraine. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Leave fumbles at the beep

NFL

New audio indicators used to improve grip on football

Amid the hooting and hollering at Washington Redskins minicamp, there's a different sound in the air during running back drills.

Coaches whack at the football with Matt Jones carrying it, and it beeps. Then it beeps longer.

That's a good sign.

The Redskins are one of five NFL teams using so-called beeping or whistling footballs to emphasize ball security. When the ball is being held correctly with the fundamental five points of pressure, it emits an audible beeping sound at about 80 decibels to tell a player he's doing it right.

"If I had that ball in high school, I don't think I would've had a fumble," Jones said. "It's teaching me how to squeeze the ball at the point of contact. Everything has changed about me holding the ball."

Cutting down on fumbles is the goal of the ball, developed by Division II Northwood University assistant coach Tom Creguer and used by the Redskins, Dallas Cowboys, Indianapolis Colts, Baltimore Ravens, Tampa Bay Buccaneers and several college teams, including Tennessee and Michigan State. The San Diego Chargers plan to start using them at training camp.

Matt Jones and his Washington teammates used new football technology at this year's NFL minicamp. ALEX BRANDON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Creguer said practicing with "High and Tight" footballs, which cost about $150 each, reduced Northwood's fumbles by 63 per cent last season. Many NFL position coaches got the lowdown on them at the scouting combine.

"It basically reinforces the proper hold by teaching the athlete to put their forearm to the panel, their panel to

Ball security, that's the most important thing on the field.

Cowboys running back Alfred Morris the chest and to compress the ball evenly with equal distribution of pressure, therefore creating basically a vice around the football, creating that muscle memory of what it feels like to have the ball secured to their body at all times," Creguer said in a phone interview.

Coaches have taught ball security for decades, but this technology adds another element. Creguer said Cowboys running backs coach Gary Brown texted him that he'll use the beeping footballs as long as he's working.

That doesn't mean Cowboys players warmed up to them right away.

"They didn't like it at first," Brown said. "I think it was just the pressure you had to do it. They're not used to squeezing it that hard."

Players aren't the only ones adjusting to how to squeeze a football tight enough. During a presentation on ball security, Ravens running backs coach Thomas Hammock demonstrated and then tossed the ball to coach John Harbaugh, who couldn't get it to beep.

"I've been working out; I feel like I'm pretty strong right now," Harbaugh said with a laugh. "Found out later the battery was dead, for the record. I'm sticking to it, that's right."

On the field, though, it seems to be working. Brown said Cowboys running backs Ezekiel Elliott and Alfred Morris fumbled less during organized team activities and minicamp after working with the beeping balls in drills.

Colts running back Robert Turbin has only lost one fumble in 281 career carries but is open to new ideas about how to get better. He had never seen anything like the beeping footballs.

"All running backs fumble, but as they say, iron sharpens iron, so just because you're good at something doesn't mean you can't get better at it," Turbin said.

RECIPE Grilled Courgettes With Feta and Chilli

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

Zucchini is a surprisingly satisfying base for any vegetarian meal. Simply grilled and topped with soft feta cheese and spicy chilli, it makes a quick, hot dinner or an excellent, chilled lunch the next day.

Ready in
Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 10 minutes

Ingredients

- 2 zucchini, sliced thinly
- Extra virgin olive oil
- ½ - 1 fresh chilli (red or green) finely diced
- ½ cup Feta cheese
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- handful fresh mint,

finely chopped
• Salt and pepper to taste

Directions

1. Use a mandolin or vegetable peeler to thinly slice your zucchini. Heat a frying pan or a grill pan with a bit of oil until medium hot, then add the zucchini. Fry quickly for about 2-3 minutes until the zucchini soften.

2. Remove from the pan and spread the zucchini out on a plate.

3. Sprinkle the zucchini with the chopped chilli, crumbled up feta cheese, and squeeze the lemon on top. Season, drizzle with olive oil, and sprinkle the mint on top.

IT'S ALL IN THE STARS Your daily horoscope by Francis Drake

Aries March 21 - April 20
Guard against the temptation to promise too much to others today just because you want to please them. (And don't exaggerate, because you will be found out.) The fish was how big?

Taurus April 21 - May 21
This is a good day for business and commerce. However, it is easy to go overboard today, so be careful. Don't pay too much for something.

Gemini May 22 - June 21
Today you are optimistic and enthusiastic. Be careful not to overlook details today while doing everything in bold, broad strokes!

Cancer June 22 - July 23
Because you feel sympathetic for others who are less fortunate today, you want to help. You might work behind the scenes using social media or some kind of publicity.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
You'll be happy to lend your energy to charitable organizations to help the needy today. This is also a great day to schmooze with others. Have fun!

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Your relations with others, especially in classes, meetings and groups, are upbeat and positive today. This is a good day to set long-range goals, because you are quick to see the whole picture.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You are so smooth-talking today that you will impress parents, bosses, VIPs and the police. (They like your optimism and positive attitude!)

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
In financial discussions, especially about inheritances and shared property, be careful about details. You might be so focused on the big picture that you overlook something small that is important.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Relations with partners and close friends are upbeat and joyful today. It will be fun to sit down with others and plan big projects.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
To protect yourself, be reasonable in your promises to co-workers and customers at work today. Don't go overboard, which you might be tempted to do. Nevertheless, your enthusiasm is a welcome thing!

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You might overdo having a good time today — overeating, overdrinking and overspending! Meanwhile, romance swoons dizzily along.

Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20
You've got big plans to make improvements and repairs where you live. Today is a good day for family discussions about how to improve your home.
